The Rules

Federal Legislation

Landlords must ensure that their rental property is properly fitted with the required number of working smoke alarms, complying with the Australian Standard (3786:2015), and that they are installed as outlined in the Building Code of Australia (BCA) part 3.7.2.3. This legislation is applicable to all states of Australia.

State Legislation

Queensland

As of 1st July 2007, changes were applied to the Queensland Fire and Rescue Service Act 1990, stating that every smoke alarm in a Queensland rental property requires ongoing maintenance. Under this legislation, Landlords or agents must test and clean each smoke alarm within 30 days prior to each tenancy change or renewal. Not only this, but each smoke alarm and battery must be replaced before the expiry date. The legislation prohibits the transfer of these responsibilities to the tenant.

New South Wales

To enhance safety and minimise loss-of-life in building fires, the NSW Parliament enacted the Building Legislation Amendment (Smoke Alarms) Act 2006. Smoke alarms in buildings providing sleeping accommodation requires:

- (a) Installation of one or more smoke alarms in buildings in which persons sleep.
- (b) The maintenance of smoke alarms installed in such buildings.
- (c) Prohibiting persons from removing or interfering with the operation of smoke alarms installed in such buildings.

The Legislation refers to residential accommodation across NSW and requires under Division 186B that a smoke alarm 'must be functioning' and must comply with the requirements of Australian Standard 3786:2015 specifications and must be Scientific Services Laboratory (SSL) listed. SSL is part of the Federal Government Analytical Laboratories. The landlord is responsible to ensure that smoke alarms are installed and maintained in the residential premises in accordance with section 146A of the Environmental Planning and Assessment Act 1979.

Australian Capital Territory

An Australian Capital Territory (ACT) specific amendment to the BCA states that properties built post September 1994, require hard-wired smoke alarms to be installed.

*Pre September 1994 properties. If your property is built prior to September 1994, we will install or replace 9 volt smoke alarms in locations as detailed in the latest Building Code of Australia - in order to protect your property and ensure occupants' safety.

South Australia

The Development Act 1993 requires smoke alarms to be installed on every storey, they must be located between each part of the dwelling containing bedrooms and the remainder of the dwelling. Smoke alarms must also be installed in any hallway leading to the bedrooms. Landlords must comply with smoke alarm legislation in all residential rental properties including detached houses, villa units, sole occupancy units, guest houses and hostels.

Victoria

Section 707 of the Building Regulations 2006 and the Practice Note 2006-27 from the Building Commission reiterates what is set out in the Building Code of Australia (BCA) Part 3.7.2.3. That is, Landlords must ensure their rental property is fitted with the required number of working smoke alarms compliant with Australian Standard 3786:2015 in correct positions.

Additionally, the Practice Note 2006-27 states that smoke alarms must be properly maintained as outlined in Part 12 of the Building Regulations. Smoke alarms must be tested in accordance with manufacturer's instructions, batteries changed annually and alarms cleaned to remove dust. Landlords have a duty of care to ensure their rental property is always compliant to this legislation.

Your Responsibilities

Smoke alarm maintenance is governed by both State and Federal legislation. Each state has different requirements. Anyone who does not comply with this legislation is guilty of an offence.

For a complete list of legislative requirements for each state of Australia that we operate in, please see back page.

The Risks

Failure to take every practical step to ensure the safety of your tenants and property may result in the dismissal of insurance claims for damage, personal injury or loss of life. Your duty-of-care requires you to have working smoke alarms installed in accordance with the Building Code of Australia and Australian Standards, and to ensure they are regularly maintained and replaced when necessary (faulty or expired). Failure to comply may result in heavy financial penalties.

Service Options
