SIGNS OF CONFIDENCE IN THE MARKET

There is no doubt... that after five trying years, the property market is exhibiting signs of confidence. Such an ephemeral concept; confidence can wax and wane as easily as the moon, except that it lasts a little longer in any one phase. The lowest interest rates in memory, the willingness of banks to lend and fewer homes on the market are all indications of the Australian love affair with real estate. But... don't you just love statistics! You can massage them, manipulate them and twist them and extrapolate them to pretty much reach any conclusion you wish.

The figures show that since 2010, the period of growth in Robina, over five years has been -1.04% for houses and - 10.23% for units. Thus a property bought in 2008/09 is worth pretty much the same today while units still have a way to go to avoid a substantial capital loss if sold. But if you had bought two years earlier (07/08) before the GFC, your property would be worth 17% more today! Timing is indeed everything, especially in real estate.

According to RP Data, the median household income, assuming two incomes, is $65,000 per annum with the median housing loan being repaid at 37% of income ($24,000pa). This appears to have blown out from the accepted safety/comfort level of 30% which may explain why social commentators are so concerned with the mounting level of debt.

Some other interesting data thanks to Core Logic show that for the Gold Coast the number of sales during 2014 was 6% higher than the previous year. Similarly they are selling faster, from 85 to 73 days on the average. Units were 5% higher as time on market also improved from 105 to 92 selling days.

Other pertinent pieces of information show that the average discount from an asking price was 6.1%. So, the median house sale of $521,000 was on the market for $553,000 and one could safely infer that houses at the lower end of the market sold close to the asking price with the prestige homes being discounted by as much as 10%.

What does all this mean for you? If you are not selling, it doesn't matter at all. Buying and selling in the same market has always made very little difference. Granted, if you are downsizing, greater compromises are necessary as the less expensive properties, with less choice available, hold their value much more and it invariably seems you are getting less for your purchase money. Conversely, buying a more expensive home allows a greater choice and still with a more substantial 'discount' from the asking price.

PROPERTY MANAGEMENT NEWS

This Varsity Lakes SOHO (Small Office/Home Office) was recently leased and the testimonial speaks for itself:-

Testimonial (Doug and Maggie Wroe) "We first called on Lia and Jaimie when we were struggling with a recalcitrant tenant. We needed someone to come to our rescue and that is exactly what they did. Lia immediately put in place the legal procedures and had the tenant out of the property in quick time. Not only that, she had a new tenant ready the day after repairs were completed. The new tenant she found has been a delight and now under her care we can finally "set and forget" that property. Our only regret is that we didn't call on her earlier."

In our dealings with both Lia and Jaimie we have found them thorough to an extreme. They had all procedures documented and we were astounded at the time and commitment they showed in "getting it right", a critical trait in property management.

Besides their demonstrated business acumen they are genuinely good people and we are not only ecstatic to now have them on our team but consider ourselves fortunate to be able to call them friends."

If you are looking for property investment management advice, we are always happy to discuss your aims and objectives with a view to how you may best achieve your maximum rental yield.

The are many 'key' factors to consider with professional property management to be able to achieve these yields, such as finding a suitably approved tenant who is happy to collaborate. It is imperative to maintain a tenancy relationship with a high level of communication to ensure a well cared for property. Equally crucial to success is having a property manager who is knowledgeable, pro-active and up-to-date with necessary legislation and industry standards and procedures as demanded by the 400 page Residential Tenancies and Rooming Act 2008.

Robina and Varsity (and surrounding) rental houses and units are averaging yields of around 5%, based on the last 12 months of data reports of realestate.com. Therefore, landlords are enjoying healthy increased weekly rental rates for units and houses. Growth for investment properties in these suburbs is continually strong. Based on current statistics on realestate.com, data suggests there is a high demand for properties in these areas, which is reflected in our current rental pool activity (Lia Juriansz, Senior Property Investment Manager).
